

FX and Rates Sentiment Survey

EURUSD round-trip complete

Key takeaways

- Investors hold a short EURUSD view for the first time since liberation day
- A pivot in the balance of risks for US growth vs inflation drove a pivot in US curve positions from steepeners to flatteners
- EM views and positioning slipped from the exhilaration in May, but both FX and duration sentiment remain above Feb/Mar '26

EURUSD bearishness back to pre-liberation day

In line with our bias (see report: Chart Alpha 20 May 2026), investors pivoted to a short EURUSD view (see Exhibit 1), though with positioning lagging behind (Exhibit 38 and Exhibit 41).

Investors see the ECB as less likely to surprise hawkish than the Fed (Exhibit 12) and more likely to surprise dovish than the Fed (Exhibit 13). Respondents see upside inflation risks as more mispriced than downside US growth risks (Exhibit 14). Almost a third see minimum conditions for a rate hike already met (Exhibit 19). US data resilience is seen as a key tailwind for USD (Exhibit 15) and AI is seen as unequivocally positive for USD (Exhibit 17).

Curve view pivot to flatteners in USD

The change in views on the balance of risks to the pricing of growth and inflation, and the change in view on minimum conditions for a hike, are likely also behind the pretty dramatic pivot in curve positions in the US too (see Exhibit 3). A pivot that also saw us stopped out of our long held, long-end steepeners (see GRW 5 Jun 26).

Meanwhile, the fact that no respondents at this stage expect either the ECB or BoE to be the central bank most likely to deliver more hikes in 2026 than currently priced sees conviction in the steepener in EUR and GBP increase, making for an interesting cross market view.

EM: The hangover is upon us

EM views and positioning slipped from the exhilaration in May, although both FX and duration sentiment remained well above Feb/Mar '26 levels. Across regions, sentiment around EM Asia remained the most stressed, with the gap between positioning in EM Asia and EEMEA/LatAm continuing to widen. Across asset classes, EM EXD grew increasingly underweight, both relative to EM local debt and other HY debt.

A guide to the BofA Global Investor Survey

Our survey was conducted between 5 June 2026 and 10 June 2026. A total of 42 global fixed income fund managers responded to the survey. Responses came from the UK, Continental Europe, APAC and the US.

Our monthly survey has asked the same two questions since its May 1989 start date: “Relative to your own benchmark, 1) how is your portfolio structured in terms of currency exposure, and 2) how is your portfolio structured in terms of duration exposure?”. In December 2011, we added two questions: 1) “How would you describe your view on the following currencies, and 2) how would you describe your view on the following bond markets?”. Regarding “exposure”, there are five responses from which to choose: Heavily Overweight, Moderately Overweight, Neutral, Moderately Underweight, and Heavily Underweight, while for “view”, the equivalent responses are Very Bullish, Bullish, Neutral, Bearish, and Very Bearish. In both cases, responses are weighted to create a Bull-Bear index from -100 to 100, with zero representing neutral.
